

Complementary Transactions

Berne said that a complementary transaction describes an interaction where conversation flows back and forth in an expected manner. The Adult speaks to the Adult; Parent to Parent; Child to Child; or Parent to Child, and Child to Parent. This type of conversation can 'go on forever' because the people know what to expect.

